There are two strains of the Afghan royal family that have chosen Italy as a refuge in two different waves.

The first to arrive in Rome was, in 1929, King Amanullah, son of Abibullah, also called the "great reformer", who was deposed by a revolt of the mullahs. The ruler of a dynasty that became hereditary since 1747 (Afghanistan was proclaimed English Protectorate in 1879), to which the kingdom was torn by a "water seller", took refuge first in India and then in our country where he was welcomed with great honors from the Savoy. Amanullah had a beautiful wife named Soraya, three very charming daughters, including India, who lives in Rome, Malhia and Najia, both of whom live in Turkey. Of the king's sons, Enajatullah died, Ramtullah lives in Rome and Essanullah in Switzerland. Among the other relatives who fled with him, the young prince Abdullah Hassan, son of Mohammed Hassan and the sister of King Nur el Suraja (Rasja) among the founders of the mosque in Rome.
